Signature Speech — Built To Break

Full title: “Built To Break: What Your Body Is Carrying That Your Mind Won’t Say”

Length: 60–90 min keynote · live somatic exercise included · Q&A buffer to 90 min

Primary audience: Men carrying unprocessed pain showing up as physical symptoms — chronic tension, insomnia, rage, burnout, back/jaw/gut pain. Also anyone performing okayness while quietly falling apart.

Hook: Raised-hands physical symptom exercise gets the whole room participating in the first 60 seconds.

SPEECH STRUCTURE

Part 1 (0–5 min)	Hook — raised hands + three pillars introduced
Part 2 (5–12 min)	The Problem — nervous system science, Pillar 1 named
Part 3 (12–30 min)	Hope’s Story — land acknowledgment + 5 acts (the wound, body speaks, mind cracks open, the collapse, the discovery)
Part 4 (32–50 min)	The Method — all four workshops taught live, including a live breathing exercise
Part 5 (50–60 min)	Client Testimonial — 10-year client, all three pillars
Part 6 (60–70 min)	CTA — three doors (Hope Reset free audio, workshop, 1:1 coaching)
Close (70–75 min)	Closing image + benediction: “There’s Always Hope.”

Cultural Identity & Land Acknowledgment

Heritage: Hope is Lakota (Rosebud) and was raised in Comanche ways. She carries two nations in her body and two traditions of understanding the world.

Every keynote includes a formal land acknowledgment before Hope’s personal story. She acknowledges the land, her ancestors, and the ceremonial knowing that preceded every clinical tool she teaches — “Healing is not something you find in a clinic. It is something you remember.”

The candle intention ritual in Workshop 1 is rooted in her Comanche and Lakota ceremonial background. Ceremony is medicine. It is woven into every offering, not added as decoration.

Aho: A word of affirmation and acknowledgment used across many Native nations. In Hope's context it carries the spirit of the land acknowledgment — spoken or felt as: this is true, this is witnessed, this is honored.
